To say that the citizens were heavily armed would be but conveying a slight idea of the walking batteries that surrounded the ground, to say nothing of a dozen of long-range sharp-shooters de-ployed on the hill overlooking the park. The advance force was accompanied by a couple of resident reporters, who, sec-ing the time for action approach and go by without any visible violation of the law, or in fact nobody coming to the sa-cred soil for that evil purpose, took the whole thing in as one of Ben. Shott's clever practical jokes on our simple-minded city officials, who disbanded their force in utter disgust at the nonappearance of the enemy, and resolved to wreak vengeance on Benjamin if ever he attempted to exhibit his menageric in this neck o' woods on the Sabbath.

Mrs. Lizzie Petit Cutler, the writer, and Mrs. Agnes Storrs Vedder, the singer, have been giving a series of receptions, devoted to muste and dramatic recitations. These receptions have been crowded with appreciative people, and are mentioned as among the successes of the season.

Lady Scott-Miss Jobson, of Lochore-Lady Scott—Miss Jouson, of Lochore— the daughter-in-law of Sir Walter Scott, died in London on March 19. Sie was mairied to Mr. Walter Scott, afterward Sir Walter Scott, in 1823, and became a widow in 1847. Scott sponks of her in one of his letters as "a very sweet and pretty Mrs. Anne Page."

Miss Annie Louise Cary astonished the Hartford people by a gorgeous exhibition of diamonds at her concert the other evening. The Times of that city describes the gems, and adds in an admiring way: "Her hair was dressed simply, with heavy braids, and ornamented with natural flowers, held by a large diamond butterfly, which was not visible from the front, and was, as Miss Cary naively remarked, "for the benefit of the chorus."

Mme. Andre, who was recently buried in Paris, died possessed of the modest sum of 10,000,000 francs. When her husband departed this vale of tears his fortune amounted to 20,000,000, half of which sum fell to his wife, the other half going to his son, M. Edouard Andre, who built the splendid hotel in the Boulevard Halfseman at a cost of 1000,000. levard Haussmann at a cost of 4,000,000 francs. He was looked upon as the certain heir of his mother, but she has only left him her jewels, valued at the trifling sum of 1,000,000 france.

Mrs. Franklin S. Kinney, whose death Mrs. Franklin S. Kinney, whose death has just been announced, was a sister of the late Mrs. Senator Dixon, of Connecticut, and like Mrs. Dixon a lady of rare personal charms and varied personal accomplishments. She was well known in the society of New Brunswick and of 'Washington as well as of this city. Her only daughter, Miss Constance Kinney, who was married some years ago at Nice to Count Gianotti, now resides in Europe.

Mrs. Mary Clemmer believes that the size of the fourteen ears and seven noses of the Cabinet is something remarkable, and she makes that observation palatable by saying that "You never saw a man who amounted to any-thing for action who had a little pinched up nose, ears, or mouth." Speaking of Attorney-General Devens, she declares that he is reported to have said to a visitor: "You see in me the biggest fool in Massachusetts. I left a place that suited me exactly for one that does not suit me at all."

Miss Waite, daughter of the Chief Justice, has the rare faculty of being able to talk to several people at once. Rare faculty! Oh, ignoramus, did you never hear a woman on moving day tell the drayman how to carry the bureau down stairs, scream instructions to the woman taking up the carpets, yell at the boy packing the china, tell the hired gir what to do with the tinware and stove furniture, shrick her husband into a cold sweat for emptying half a bushed of soot out of the stovepipe on the parlor floor, sniff at the woman across the street who wasn't going to move and was looking on, and scold seven chil-dren for nine different things, with one and the same was of her inflexible tongue? Rare facuity, indeed.-[Hawk-

Mrs. Fanny Kemble says of Barry Cornwall and his wife, Anne Skepper, that she was like a fresh lemon—golden, fragrant, firm, and wholesome-and he fragrant, firm, and wholesome—and he was like the hovey of Hymettus; they were an incomparable compound. She describes a visit which Sotheby, the post, once paid to Mrs. Joanna Baillie, whose great—and unavaling—ambition it was to be a successful writer for the stage. The poetess called him into her little kitchen (she was not rich, kept few servants, and did not disdain sometimes to make her own pies and pudtimes to make her own pies and pud-dings) and bade him, as she was up to the cloows in flour and paste, draw from her pocket a paper; it was a play-bill, sent to her by some friend in the counsent to her of some them.
